TIME

- Time is the one thing that cannot be taken back until it has gone.
- Time is only wasted, and we need to think twice before we waste it.
- We all know that once the time is passed, it can never be taken back, but people still waste it.
- We sometimes get involved in pointless activities but neglect our essential tasks.
- People are still in the habit of finishing their assignments at the last moment, which is a bad habit.

PUNCTUALITY

is not about being on time, it's basically about respecting

YOUR OWN COMMITMENTS.

PUNCTUALITY

Consistently being on time is the product of proper planning, personal discipline, and a respect for other people's time.

Making a habit of being late demonstrates none of these things and is often a sign of patchy priorities and selfishness. Habitual lateness says, "My time is more valuable than yours."

Learn to be reliable and a person of integrity by adopting the discipline necessary to be on time.

BEING PUNCTUAL SHOWS THAT YOU...

HAVE INTEGRITY

VALUE & RESPECT

To celebrate World Music Day and International Yoga Day, we at TIS organized a program on June 21, 2021 (summer solstice) for the students. Due to the current pandemic situation, it was a virtual event instead of the usual physical concert at the auditorium. All the students were eager to join the event at noon.

The International Yoga Day began by enlightening the students by giving information about the foundation of yoga day, and benefits of yoga were also discussed. The children were showered with knowledge about yoga and were informed about the winners of the Surya namaskar competition. The students appreciated the Surya namaskar session and Power yoga session conducted by Anup sir. They felt fresh and energetic for the rest of the day's lectures.

On the same day, we also celebrated World Music Day. Students were illuminated with knowledge about music by their peer- Keshav. Some of the students showcased their divine love for music by singing or playing different instruments. Everyone was enjoying themselves and were very interactive in the comment box. The day ended with the announcement of the winners and runners-up of the Surya namaskar competition.

Making Learning an Unforgettable Experience at TIS

Learning should be an unforgettable experience at school, which makes an impermeable impression on a student's soul.

Thakur International School – IGCSE and A levels, is a unique school which understands that a school is an important place where young learners acquire knowledge so learning should be made an unforgettable experience for them.

In order to provide a simulating learning environment, Thakur International School – IGCSE and A levels makes every effort to provide an erudite and fun learning experience. They continuously try to improvise the overall learning experience and so they have some unique learning teaching methods such as:

-Encouraging practical learning through activities and games instead of by hearing topics.

-Using technology zones like AR/VR theatre facilities to enrich knowledge and have a great experience there.

-Spending enough amount of time for teacher to student interaction and peer to peer interaction too.

-Providing support classes to clear out problems so that students don't have to attend extra classes.

-Awarding learners for achievements to encourage and motivate them. Providing the best content knowledge and best teachers for each subject with best teaching methods.

In this covid pandemic too, the school has been trying its best to making this learning experience an unforgettable and stimulating one. Teachers interact through video cameras to make it more lively and talk through the microphone to clear doubts and stay active in the class. They also make it more fun and engaging through making students play quizzes, games and do activities, experiments online.

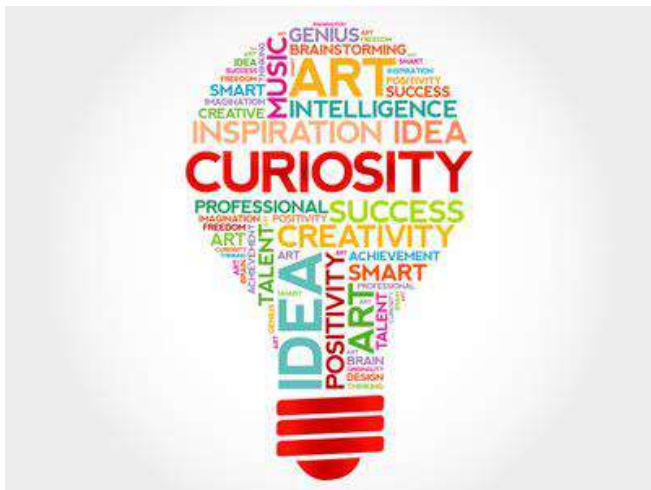

As you can see, a successful online learning experience tends to be one that keeps students engaged in varying teaching and learning styles and by using both audio and visual content to create a multimodal learning experience.

Curiosity Leads to Passion!

There is an old saying: “curiosity kills the cat”; but this writer finds it disagreeable. To be curious is a part of life, something that everyone has, something that has caused much success to even the most insignificant of men.

To give you a true story, a man once wished to learn editing, and was quite curious about it so he learned, and grew to adore the art. Today, editing has become a successful career for him. And then, one might ask oneself, what would’ve happened if he did not act on his curiosity?

When you act on your curiosity, you ask questions, and questions are an important part of growth. Why, you might ask, are questions important? To copy the old saying, “ask, and ye shall receive”, it means that when you ask a question, you get an answer. And when you get your answer, you learn. After all, if scientists never questioned anything, one would wonder where we would be at this moment. Would we have known that gravity existed if Isaac Newton wasn’t curious about how the apple fell on his head? To explain it simply, curiosity will lead you to learning.

There are things that, when learned, you would want to try, and perchance, you might like them, perhaps even grow to love them. Things that you might love may even become your hobby, your zeal, your passion. Thus, your curiosity in the end is what led you to the path you love.

With this, one should conclude that curiosity did not, indeed, kill the cat, but rather, nurtured it to greatness. And believe it or not, but leading a life according to your passion may be a more successful life than a life led by the conventional description of ‘success’. For he who is happy leads the best life.

Curiosity
